

Cloud Migration

Your trusted partner to reduce risk and migrate to the right cloud platform

When a cloud or hybrid-cloud platform has been selected as the platform of choice for a range of IT workloads, or as a component in a transformation program the activity to migrate begins.

The Challenge

The potential complexity can give rise to high levels of risk. It is currently reported that over 50% of migration projects are set to exceed budget and cause disruption in 2019.

There are two key problem areas that lead to this fact. Firstly, the traditional methods of spreadsheet and project planning methods are simply fraught with potential for significant multiple mistakes. In many cases we find that a large range of assumptions or misunderstandings about existing estate, licensing, performance requirements and configurations are made and, in some cases, misunderstood.

Often "At Scale" programs of this type are unfamiliar to many relied upon to execute, these factors can conspire to contribute to flawed execution. In fact, in many cases this can be an organisations first experience of migration production systems into the cloud.

The Solution

Organisations need an "End to End" process that mitigates risk and costly over-runs. It is also critical that at no point during the program that data or security is compromised.

Bell has enormous experience in this arena with tens of thousands of workloads having been migrated successfully, on to all types of platforms on time and on budget.

There are two components of our solution, firstly we have a range of expertise and services that are simply accustomed and tailored for the task. Secondly the whole process is underpinned by vClarus our own methodology and tool set, that is a key contributor to the enviable reputation that we have.

Once a comprehensive discovery process is completed, application candidacy is understood, and the program and timescales are defined, vClarus provides the single "point of truth" that ensures that the act of migration is sequenced correctly and that throughout the process can be monitored allowing problems to be solved "in flight" ensuring that program timescales are achieved.

Having this level of consistency and understanding also ensures that disruption is minimised, outcomes are understood and risk both operationally and reputationally are significantly reduced.

Why Bell

Having the right tools and expertise at the time of high-profile complex programs is a key to ensuring success.

Industry analysts tell us that during migration programs, over-runs regularly add between 30% and 50% to the initially anticipated cost. With Bell we assure you of a fixed cost, fixed outcome program.

Let Bell partner with you to ensure the cloud or hybrid-cloud outcome you seek is the one you achieve.
