

Protecting Your External Services

Further development of their successful encasement system recently allowed Jtech Services to install a new external ducting profile at a central London hospital refurbishment project.

The twofold purpose was to protect the downwater pipes from vandalism and also to assist building security by inhibiting access by climbing. The result is a product that is smooth in profile and that sits flush to the brickwork thus denying any climbing points.

The system can be powder coated in any colour to match the building and so is robust, practical as well as aesthetically pleasing.

The system comes complete with the usual range of accessories such as joint covers and stop ends.
